SYNOPSIS

It is 10:00 PM at the CITE Computer Lab, and the clock is ticking toward a strict 11:59 PM project deadline set by the unrelenting Ma'am Love. While her classmate Althea glides through with a pristine submission completed days ago, Alexa is fueled solely by panic, caffeine, and zero functioning lines of code.

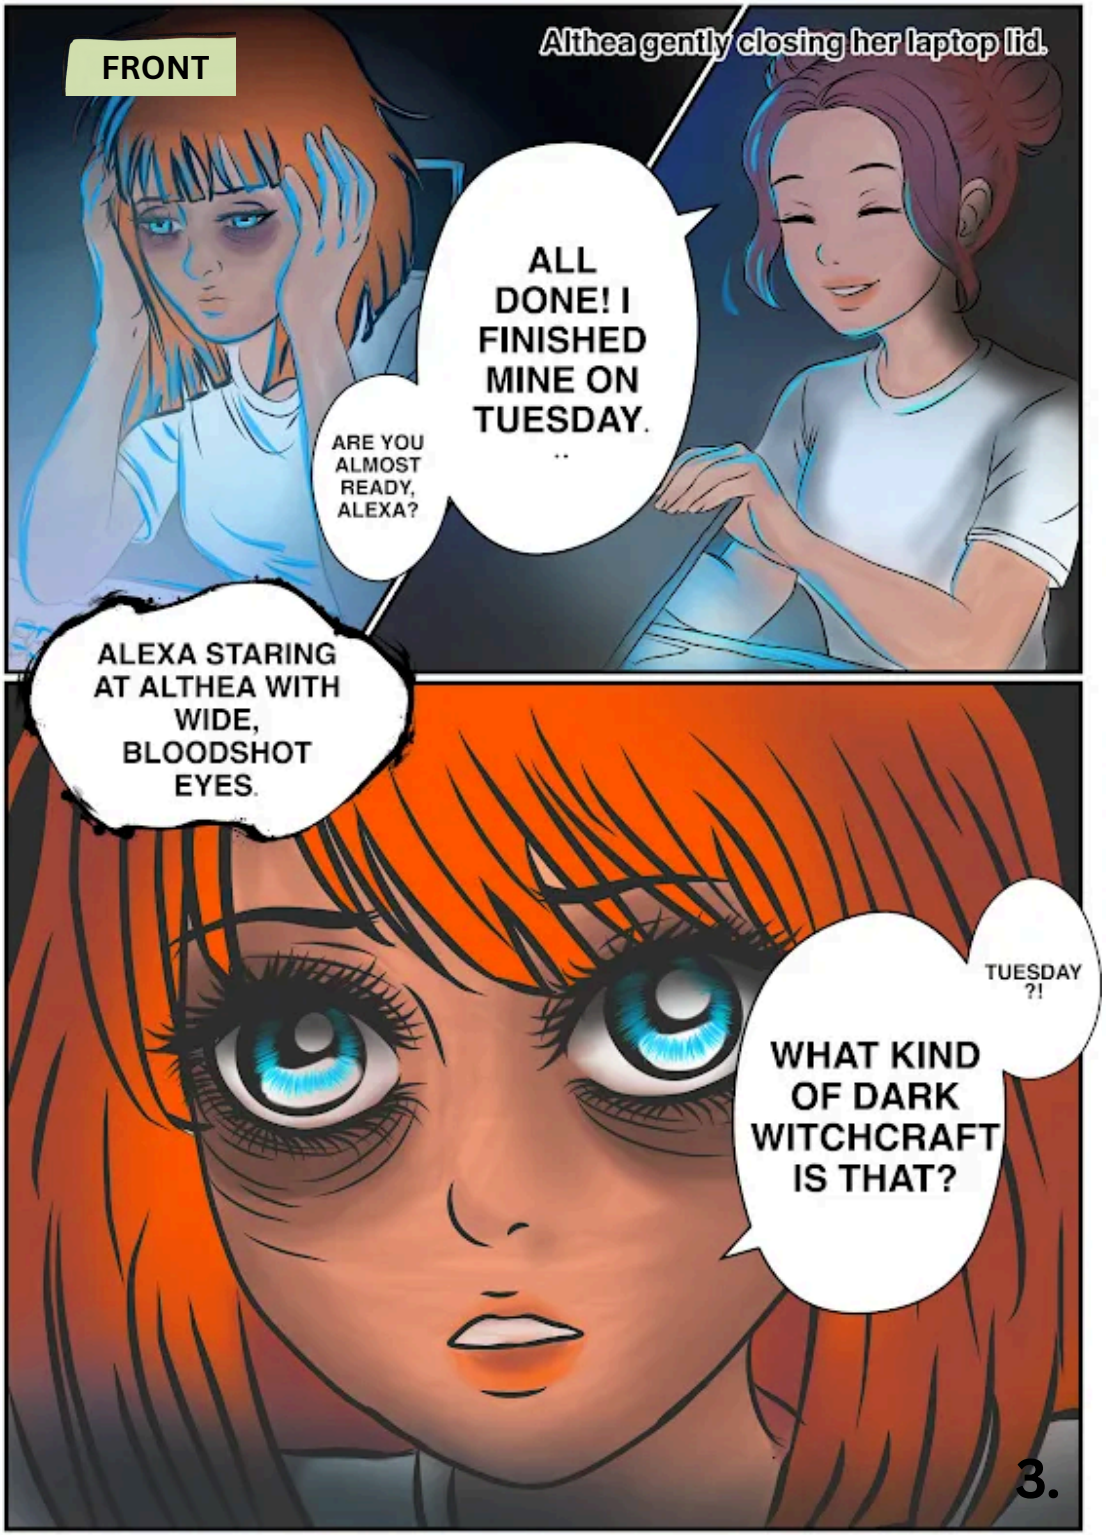

When a fatal syntax error strikes at Line 404, Bugsy—a mischievous red semicolon monster—materializes directly from the screen to torment her. Alexa must push into midnight overdrive, battle coding demons, and navigate a sudden campus network breakdown in a frantic sprint against time.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

Alexa: The caffeinated, overworked protagonist fighting against time, syntax errors, and pure exhaustion.
Althea: Alexa's hyper-organized classmate whose serene early completion makes her the ultimate contrast to Alexa's chaos.
Bugsy: A sharp-witted red semicolon monster born from syntax errors who loves pushing Alexa's buttons (before offering a surprisingly soft touch).
Ma'am Love (Shadow): The departmental authority figure whose zero-tolerance policy looms over every keypress in the lab.

404: SLEEP NOT FOUND
The Midnight Deadline

Two hours left. One main program. Zero functioning lines of code.

It’s 10:00 PM in the CITE Computer Lab, and the clock is mercilessly ticking down to Ma’am Love’s ironclad 11:59 PM deadline. While her overachieving classmate Althea glides out the door with a pristine, early submission, Alexa is running on pure bean juice, sweat, and absolute desperation.

Just when things couldn't get worse, a fatal error crashes the IDE and summons Bugsy—a mischievous, code-devouring semicolon demon who literally ate her syntax.

To survive the night, Alexa must enter caffeine-fueled overdrive, battle multiplying bugs, and conquer a sudden Wi-Fi catastrophe in a frantic, high-stakes sprint against the midnight clock. Will she make the submission in time, or will Line 404 claim another victim?
